

High Altitude Permaculture presents

Permaculture Teacher Training Course and Mentorship Program 2012

Permaculture is at last coming into its own as the premier strategy for moving towards an abundant, healthy planet. If humans are truly to transition to a sane way of living on earth, permaculture teachers will be needed in every neighborhood, school and organization around the world.

Building on their previous programs, Sandy Cruz and Becky Elder will offer a regionally-based course for Permaculture Teacher's Certification in early 2012, providing ongoing support for new teachers and opportunities to assist experienced instructors at various events. Learn how to organize full-fledged design courses, or just get comfortable teaching your favorite niche. Teaching is the very best way to learn!

Winter classroom work will focus on developing teaching and organizational skills, with hands-on exercises to build confidence and ease. Participants will then assist at permaculture workshops, introductory evenings and event tables along the Front Range, and have an individual conference with the instructors. The closing day of the course in June will include future planning.

Program is limited to 12 participants.

Dates and Times Weekend of January 28th - 29th, 2012
Weekend of February 11th - 12th, 2012
(Snow dates: Weekend of February 25th - 26th, 2012)
and Saturday, June 23rd, 2012
9:00 AM to 5:00 PM each day
plus assisting at 3 events between February 13th and June 20th, and an individual conference with the instructors

Location Various venues along the Front Range

Instructors Sandy Cruz, Becky Elder and guest instructors

Prerequisite Permaculture Design Course Certification

Cost $700 if paid in full by 12/20/11
$850 after 12/20/11

Contact Sandy Cruz, (719) 539-7685, sandy@hialtpc.org
(please call before registering)

As individuals, we are like the separate trees of this border.
As a team, we are a diverse forest!

